Rooted in Rhythm

When we first met Dustin six years ago, he had turned his lifelong passion for music into a business - Skyline Studios - based in downtown Mitchell. Inspired by his musician parents, Dustin trained in Toronto before returning to Perth County to launch his dream. Back then, he appreciated the slower pace, natural surroundings, and strong local clientele that made Mitchell feel like the perfect place to grow.

Today, Skyline Studios is still going strong - currently located next to the Mitchell post office - and has expanded to include DJ services and video production. These additions have taken Dustin's work across Ontario, collaborating with everyone from families to regional organizations.

Dustin now lives in St. Marys with his wife, two children, and two dogs, but he continues to run his business in West Perth and values Perth County for its supportive community and balanced lifestyle. "It's the kind of place where you can plant roots and build something meaningful without losing your sense of balance," he says.

He notes that rising costs are making it harder for new entrepreneurs to do what he did. "It's a challenge across Canada, but Perth County remains more affordable than the cities. If you work hard and smart, you can build something here."
