

"I moved from Switzerland to Perth County to pursue a great opportunity. My wife and our oldest two children moved here from the United States; we all love it here. Everyone felt at home in no time."

Finding a niche

Growing up in Bonau, a small town in northeast Switzerland, Ramon's family owned a cheese-making business.

His upbringing inspired his education, and ultimately he became a master cheesemaker.

The Weber family, who are also from Switzerland, decided to buy a farm in Perth South when they moved to Canada about 20 years ago. They had the vision to open Stonetown Cheese, and luckily they found Ramon to help make the (delicious!) dream come to life.

Ramon loves his career. "I am part of every step of the product I produce, which is very satisfying. I really enjoy making incredible cheese for people. It's nice to see the positive results of my work."

When Ramon and his family first moved to Perth County, it was for an amazing professional opportunity. Now they are in love with their new home and couldn't be happier that they made the move.

"It's a beautiful place to raise a family. I love the small town vibe combined with the vast rural landscapes. If we need to get that city feel, London is close by. It's the perfect spot." ■
